h Lyall's philosophy ran a counter-current of poetry, which ever and again rose to the surface. His "Old Pindari" and other ballads and verses were copied from hand to hand, and repeated from mouth to mouth, among his countrymen in India long before his name was heard in England. Some of them, like "Charles's Wain—to a Child" (written for his little daughter), are instinct with a beautiful sensibility. Others disclose more clearly than any of his better-known works that mingling of pathetic longing, gentle despondency, and subdued speculative unrest which neither public honours, nor the love of many friends, nor the lifelong tenderness of a devoted wife and the affection of children could wholly tranquillize. We must conclude with a quotation of a single specimen, as it appears in one of the early manuscript copies which were handed about in India :—

MEDITATIONS OF A HINDU PRINCE AND SCEPTIC.

All the world over, I wonder, in lands that I never have trod,
Are the people eternally seeking for the signs and steps of a God ?
Westward across the ocean, and northward across the snow,
Do they all stand gazing as ever, and what do the wisest know ?

* * * * *

The trees wave a shadowy answer, and the rock frowns hollow and grim,
And the form and the nod of the demon are caught in the twilight dim ;
And we look to the sunlight falling afar on the mountain crest,
Is there never a path runs upward to a refuge there and a rest ?
The path, ah ! who has shown it, and which is the faithful guide ?
The haven, ah ! who has known it ? for steep is the mountain side ;
For ever the shot strikes surely, and ever the wasted breath
Of the praying multitude rises, whose only answer is death.

Mr. ASQUITH.—That is a very good r.
I should not answer. (Laughter.)

Mr. HOBHOUSE.—I have no official information as to the salaries of the Principals of the English Universities referred to. I beg to refer the hon. member to my reply of March 27 to his question on the subject of the additional grant to Scottish Universities. No condition was made that the salaries should be reduced, and the action of the Treasury was confined to deciding how much of the new grant should be allocated to an augmentation of the salaries.

SIR H. CRAIK.—Arising out of that, may I ask the right hon. gentleman whether he is aware that no such right of interference is assumed by the Treasury with regard to any English University or by the Education Department in fixing the salary of a single teacher of elementary schools; and whether, in spite of that, the Treasury are determined to fix the salaries imposed on the Principals of these ancient Scottish Universities?

Mr. HOBHOUSE.—No, Sir; they did not fix the salaries, but they have given an extra grant this year of £31,000, and have said that so much of that extra grant shall be given to the Principals in augmentation of their existing salaries.

SIR H. CRAIK.—Is it not the fact that the Treasury have set aside the decision of the Elgin Committee appointed by themselves and did interfere with the salaries of the officers of these Universities?

Mr. HOBHOUSE.—Yes, Sir; they have interfered to the extent of allocating a further sum given in augmentation of the salaries.

Mr. E. JONES (Merthyr Tydvil, Min.).—Is the right hon. gentleman aware that the Principals of the Welsh colleges regard even these salaries as wealth beyond the dreams of avarice? (Laughter.)

CORONATION HOLIDAYS AND WAGES.

Mr. LANSBURY asked the Prime Minister if he was aware that, according to the latest Board of Trade report on the subject of work and wages, it was not the custom for workpeople employed in the great staple industries to be paid wages for public or other holidays; was he also aware that the fixing of Thursday and Friday, June 22 and 23, as public holidays would in many cases mean that the 24th will also be taken as a holiday, thus entailing the loss of three

With heart going at a fearful rate and as I thought perspiration steadily out, I debated that the door was locked and that it was probably only nightmare. Of this I am positive that I urged this upon myself and endeavored with all my might to break the spell & wake up but for several minutes - so I seemed without avail. When I did wake up my heart was not beating violently nor was I sweating. The sensations which I had experienced at once brought to mind poor Clarence's dream - The after Congress death the young brother of Marlboro had a waxen statue made, even sized and exactly like him when he sat in his clothes at his table and nodded mechanically. 11. PM. Conquell & 1 glass strong.

In bed with rather much. Next morn fell out of bed the right side & went down down down. very distressed & uneasy & had to wake up in my dream & find that right morn. Looking my brother by candle me apparently to wake up. Then I - not being awake yet thought my brother had the nt morn & rolled out of his side of the bed & watched him. he looked as if he might be lame & out of joint, he squirmed about so. I got up. & shook him & he came back to bed & we had a good laugh together over the nightmare & then turned round to go to sleep again when I in reality woke up & had a laugh over my dream.

'Tis man's worst deed

To let the things that have been' meet
And in the unmeaning present still the past

Solitude -- "the days soft sleep" (Wife) for fear a second time

To wet a widows eye

The error of a sickly mind
And troubled thoughts, clouding the pure and waters clear, of Reason

While I teach

Truth which transcends the searching school

And half had staggered that start I began

Free from self sickening, curing low delirium

I have not found a whiter soul than

For she had studied Patience in the of Christ, much comfort she had there

And was a follower of the Nazarene

For wounds like his Christ & the only cure a paley smitten old old man

A semblance with form of what he bear me on

To the not unexpected evening of all

Made black by moving storm and with their desperate hands, cut off

The last low relief of lingering faith

Ground which love had made

Love alone had power to heal

Midsummer - Night's Dream

Awake the pert and mumble spirit of mirth

1. 1. With feigning voice verses of feigning love
And stolen the impression of her fantasy
With bracelets of thy hair, rings garlands, anels, Knacks, trifles, nosegays sweetmeats, messengers
Of strong prevalence in unhardened youth.

"In shady cloister nuptial to live a barren Tierce" chanting faint hymns to the cold fruitless moon.

"Thou blessed they that master so their blood,
To undergo such maiden pilgrimage;

But earthlier happier is the rose distilled Than that which withering in the virgin thorn Grows lives & dies in single blessedness."

"And with what art"

"Thought is deeper than all speech Feeling deeper than all thought." C. P. Crouch is truth which lies at the foundation of human morality - that a man ~~must~~ ^{who} could work out his salvation must cast out self; though he need his heart always doing it, not love of self, indifference, self complacency, self confidence, self conceit & vanity - desire or expectation of reward, self

The Amos case & case by E. J. D.

Miss Amos

Amos is a Mr. P. T. Hardy says She has been in England since she was in seven years old She was well for her what a woman she will have, but I hope she will be English

But that is one advantage of being in England - England can do it can see all kinds of things & it is not with they will get better & better but we are much better off & we are getting many good advantages

Education, peculiar in a general way
The best of the world is in England 24-1/20, America is 1/20, even the country is in a way not in relative loss of the English all the way in England

Dr. Hays brother, South & North, Y. S. & S. S.
Education, but

The English are not so good as the women, & men - 1/20, England is the best of the world, & the best of the world roads to the sea, & the sea, & the sea, & the sea
the best of the world, & the best of the world
the best of the world, & the best of the world

There are tones and inflections of voice, acquired insensibly by persons of education and refinement, which are not to be mistaken by the initiated. On the other hand, who does not recognize the truth that the unmodulated tone and provincial "twang" of the illiterate or careless stamp him as such before he can articulate ten words? The simple formula of the day's salutation tells the whole story to a fine ear, where the eye might err because tailor, dress-maker, and dancing-master have done their part well.

The old lady says, at last the secret has been found. A good morning to the old lady and her son in law. The old lady is very much in love with her son-in-law.
The old lady says, at last the secret
has been found.
